* Comment. For official tabulation, see Annex. The tabulation lists all through lines in the Berlin regional railroad district and rerouting facilities in case one of the sections of these lines should be blocked by accident or destruction in the event of war. See columns 2 and 6 of the tabulation. The information contained in the booklet enables the railroad agencies concerned to carry out the appropriate rerouting of traffic in case of emergency.

25X1
25X1APreliminary Tabulation of the Rerouting Lines(Umleitungswegeverzeichnis) (UWV)

Effective 1 May 1952

1. Content of the UWV. The UWV lists the rerouting lines for through traffic freight trains on through lines contained in the booklet. The lines concerned are subdivided into interference sections (Stoerungsabschnitte). The freight trains to be rerouted are broken down according to types of trains, marshaling depots and train picking-up points. One or several rerouting possibilities are listed for each line section.
2. Orders for the Rerouting of Freight Trains. Usually the regional railroad headquarters issues specific orders for the utilization of rerouting lines and orders to end rerouting operations. In specific cases, the main train dispatch offices and train dispatch offices may order the rerouting of trains; in exceptional cases as, for instance, after accidents and in case of an unexpected blocking of a railroad line, such orders may also be given by the station masters of the individual railroad stations. Rerouting operations extending over a period of more than three days will have to be ordered by the regional railroad headquarters because such rerouting operations require issuing new time tables for through traffic operations. The rerouting of trains operating on lines used for interzonal traffic and of local trains operating on through lines are not included in this booklet and will be ordered by the regional railroad headquarters or by the main train dispatch office and the train dispatch office concerned.
3. Handling of Rerouting Operations. Rerouting operations will be conducted in close cooperation with the main train dispatch offices, train dispatch offices, and railroad stations concerned. Freight trains will be rerouted on the basis of priority or of special time tables drawn up in accordance with Section I No 14 of the GZV (Gueterzugsverkehrsordnung) (freight train traffic regulations). The number of freight trains to be rerouted on the rerouting lines will depend on the lines' carrying capacity. Therefore, trains must not be rerouted to a rerouting line in excess of a number that can be handled without operational difficulties to the regular traffic of the rerouting line concerned. Whenever more than the carrying capacity of a rerouting line is scheduled, the nearest alternate rerouting line will be utilized for excess operations. The number of rerouted freight trains will be included in the daily operations report. In selecting rerouting lines, the regulations on the making up of freight trains and the specific missions of the trains to be rerouted will be taken into consideration. For long distance express trains and long distance freight trains, routes will be selected which guarantee the quickest transit time. In selecting a rerouting line, it must be ascertained whether the train's assignment established in the GZV requires its operation on the entire rerouting line to its destination, or whether it can be switched to its regular line after passing the blocked section. In settling this question, consideration will also be given to the availability of locomotives and personnel.
4. Signaling Procedure. In addition to the reports required by the standard train signaling regulations, advance reports on the rerouting line used, the composition of the rerouted freight train, its axle pressure and its weight will be transmitted to all junctions and locomotive and personnel exchange points on the rerouting line selected and to the station to which the train is dispatched. The directives contained in Section I No 17 paragraph b of the GZV are to be complied with.

5. Establishment of the UWV. The UWV will be established by the regional railroad headquarters. It will be drawn up so that, normally, it will not require revisions to conform with the change from summer to winter timetables or vice versa. Revisions of, and supplements to, the UWV will be submitted at the conferences of departmental heads in charge of timetables for freight traffic.
